

COMPLAINT FILED TO COLLECT FEES

Former Prosecutor Noble Hays Named Defendant in Suit Filed by Commissioners.

ASK JUDGMENT FOR $603.323
 Defendant Claims He is Entitled to Amount Under Old Law For Making Collection.

Suit has been filed in the circuit court by the board of county commissioners against Noble Hays, former prosecuting attorney, to collect certain fees, amounting to $603.32, which are alleged to have been unlawfully retained by him. The money was paid by John R. Tinder, former county clerk, as the amount of the fees due the county. They were paid by Tinder into the clerk's office after suit had been filed by the state board of accounts. They were withheld as a result of a misunderstanding of the meaning of certain statutes which for a number of years were interpreted in favor of the county clerks throughout the state.

The complaint filed by the commissioners against Hays alleges that a judgment of $1,089.89 was paid by Tinder. That later Hays, as prosecuting attorney, collected the money and accrued interest, the total amount being $1,206.67. It is further averred that the defendant retained fifty per cent. of the sum, $603.32, and paid the residue to the county. The commissioners hold that Hays was not entitled to but ten per cent. of the total amount for making the collection and ask that he be ordered by the court to pay the forty per cent. back to the county.

A preliminary motion was filed by the defendant and argued before Judge Swails Tuesday. Hays contends that under a statute which had been in force for many years he is entitled to fifty per cent. of the total amount and that he is retaining only the amount legally due him.

The attorney for the commissioners filed the case upon the ground that the former statute has been repealed by a later act and that Hays is not entitled to but ten per cent. of the amount. The board of accounts, it is said, allowed prosecuting attorneys ten per cent. for such cases and that the act governing this board is effective.

The case will come up for trial later.

Curtis Jackson was granted a divorce from Irene Jackson and the court ordered that neither should marry again within two years.

Inez Turley received a legal separation from Claude Turley.

In the case of the State vs. Wm. Stage for surety of the peace, the defendant was dismissed.

The case against Emmett Ready for alleged larceny was also dismissed.

James J. Miller who is charged with alleged trespassing by the State, asked for a continuance which was granted.

ELECTION COMMISSIONERS NAMED FOR SPECIAL PRIMARY

Democrats Will Select Candidate for Prosecutor on Saturday, April 4.

Ralph Applewhite, of Brownstown, and Deputy Prosecutor F. W. Wesner, of this city, have been selected as election commissioners in Jackson county and will have charge of the special primary April 4 when the democratic nominee for prosecuting attorney will be selected. Two commissioners will also be selected in Lawrence county. The members of the board were named by the candidates.

Over long distance telephone Tuesday afternoon John H. Underwood, of Bedford, who is a candidate for reelection, notified Mr. Wesner of his appointment. Prosecutor Underwood also stated that Sam Doman, of Mitchell, who qualified for the race, had withdrawn. No word had been received at Brownstown to this effect today. In case Doman does not make the race, the fight will be waged between J. Ross Robertson, of Brownstown, and Underwood.

The election commissioners will appoint the members of the various boards. For the special primary there will be eighteen voting places in this county. Each board will consist of but three members, the inspector and two clerks. The number of members of the boards was reduced as much as possible so that all unnecessary cost would be avoided. The primary will be conducted in the two counties under the direction of J. L. Randall, of Greencastle, and J. B. Archer, of Spencer, district chairman, who were appointed by the state committee. They will remain at the clerk's office at the Lawrence county court house during the day and will receive the official returns there. As soon as the vote in the various precincts in the two counties is counted the result will be filed with the election commissioners and they will notify the members of the state committee at Bedford.

The polls in all the precincts with the exception of Brownstown and Jackson townships will remain open from 8 o'clock in the morning until 6 o'clock in the evening. At Brownstown and Seymour the polls will be open from 7 o'clock a. m. until 8 o'clock p. m.

An unusual feature of the rules under which the primary will be conducted is that the ballots will not have to bear the initials of the clerks as in regular elections. The rules provide that the ballots shall be a certain size but do not designate upon what color of paper they shall be printed. This is taken to mean that each candidate may furnish his own ballots and they can be marked before the voter enters the polls. The clerks will record the name of each voter as the ballot is cast.

It is expected that the primary will cost from $800 to $1,000. The expense will be borne equally by the candidates. The board in charge of the primary is endeavoring to eliminate all unnecessary expense and for this reason only eighteen voting precincts in this county have been arranged.

SEVEN ATTORNEYS ENGAGED IN TRIAL

Slander Case of Mrs. Mary Hill vs. Mrs. Carrie Plummer Called in Circuit Court.

$2,500 DAMAGES ARE ASKED
 More Than Seventy-five Witnesses and Others Interested Attend the Hearing.

More than seventy-five witnesses and others interested in the case of Mrs. Mary Hill against Mrs. Carrie Plummer for slander assembled at the court house today to hear the evidence. Both the parties live in Carr township. The plaintiff is asking damages in the sum of $2,500.

The trial is attracting much attention especially in the vicinity of Medora where the principals are well known. Every point in the case is being hard fought, seven attorneys having been engaged. The plaintiff is represented by Prince and Kochenour, of Brownstown, Boruff & Boruff, of Bedford and Montgomery & Montgomery, of Seymour. The attorneys for the defendant are Seba A. Barnes, of Seymour, and Branaman & Branaman, of Brownstown.

The plaintiff began the introduction of testimony this morning. It is expected that the cases will not be completed before Thursday afternoon on account of the large number of witnesses to be examined. The trial is also delayed at times by the arguments and objections of the attorneys to certain testimony.

The case was filed May 2, last, by Mrs. Hill against Mrs. Plummer and her husband, Thomas J. Plummer. The complaint charges that in March 1913 the defendant in the presence of her husband and other persons falsely and maliciously accused the plaintiff of stealing her turkeys and it is further alleged that the defendant charged the plaintiff with poisoning her turkeys. The complaint states that the defendant remarked upon one occasion that the plaintiff "was not a fit subject to neighbor with." The plaintiff alleges that her good name has been injured by the alleged slanderous remarks of the defendant.

The witnesses are taking more than the usual interest in the case and it is reported that two women who were subpoenaed to appear at the court house engaged in a discussion of the case at the B. & O. station this morning and the conversation waxed warm and threats were passed between them.

LICENSE TAGS ARE REQUIRED BY LAW

Automobile Owners Run Risk of Being Arrested if They Neglect To Comply.

DEFINITION OF WORD "TAX"
 Purchase of License Does Not Exempt Machine From Being Assessed as Property.

Local automobile owners who are running their machines without a license are doing so in violation of a state law and are taking chances of being arrested by any constable or police officer who might harbor a desire to haul them into court. While there is a controversy regarding several features of the new law it is plain that a license must be purchased some time during the year and the officers have interpreted the act to mean that such tags must be exhibited within a reasonable time after the first of the year.

Although quite a number of arrests have been made in other cities since January 1, the Seymour police have not molested autoists who have failed to exhibit the required tags, but it is understood that the law will be enforced here in a short time. The deputy prosecutor has taken the attitude that owners of motor vehicles are entitled to a reasonable time to file application for the tags and unless they are exhibited in a short time they have neglected to comply with the law.

Many automobile owners have given considerable attention to the law which provides that they shall not be required to pay any "tax" other than that paid to the secretary of state under the automobile license law. They were of the opinion that this would exempt machines from property tax but their hopes have been shattered by the decision of the state board of tax commissioners.

Many have been living in hope that the state license would be all they would have to pay, and that the statute of the last legislature would automatically repeal the personal property tax. But the township assessors are all listing automobiles and motorcycles.

The personal property schedules made out by the state board of tax commissioners, and distributed to every county in the state for the use of the county assessors, township assessors and their deputies, includes automobiles and motorcycles. One item on the 1914 schedule is "number of automobiles and their value." This means that each motor car owner must give in to the assessor the number of cars he owns and also their cash value on the first of March this year.

The automobile owners who are seeking to evade the payment of taxes on their machines on the theory that the state license fee is all that is required now, are basing their opinions on Section 17, of the motor vehicle registration law. That section is found on page 789, of the 1914 acts, and it says in part:

"No owner of a motor vehicle, except motor trucks and motor driven commercial vehicles who shall have obtained a certificate from the secretary of state and paid registration fees as herein before provided, shall be required to pay any tax or license fee whatsoever, or to obtain any other license or permit to use or operate the same," etc.

The word "tax" is where the automobile owners hang their hope that the state license fee is all that is required of them and that they are not required to list their cars with the township assessor any longer. However, the heading of section 17 is "local ordinance prohibited," and the interpretation given by numerous attorneys for the section is that the word "tax" means a license, and that the section prohibits city councils and town boards from fixing local license fees in addition to the license fee made by the state.

The township assessors will continue to list automobiles for taxation here and whenever they find that an owner of a motor vehicle has failed to list such car or cars for taxation at what is known as its true cash value the car or cars will be listed later and tax collected.

Eben H. Wolcott, one of the state tax commissioners says the section of the motor vehicles registration law that contains the word "tax" does not refer to the personal property tax but that it simply means that no local license tax can be levied in addition to the state registration fee. He asserts that automobiles must be taxed this year the same as in previous years.

PILE OF BURNING BRUSH CAUSES FALSE FIRE ALARM

Telephone Exchange is Not Notified and There is a Delay in Sounding the Big Gong.

The reflection of the flames of the pile of burning brush on South Vine street was the cause of a fire alarm about 7 o'clock Tuesday night. Residents living in that part of the city saw the fire and thought a house or other building was burning. The alarm was sent direct to the department and the telephone exchange was not notified. As a result the gong was not sounded until seven or eight minutes after the hose wagon left the fire station.

Someone had evidently forgotten that there is a city ordinance prohibiting the burning of trash or rubbish after 4 o'clock in the afternoon. Chief Everhart said this morning that this violation of the ordinance cost the city $6 that amount being due the four volunteer firemen who responded.

Chief Everhart also stated that persons giving fire alarms are not to call the fire department but to notify the telephone exchange where the fire is located and the exchange operators will call the chief and sound the alarm. This is the quickest manner of handling such calls as the exchange has made arrangements for notifying the department and the gong is sounded by turning a lever at the exchange.

SEELY DESIRES TO QUIT THE CABINET

British War Minister Files Resignation But it is Not Accepted by Premier Asquith.

HOUSE OF COMMONS IN UPROAR

Demonstration Follows Statement of Premier That King Has Done No Wrong.

By United Press.

London, March 25—War Minister Seely filed his resignation today but Premier Asquith refused to honor it. Asquith indicated in speaking of the resignation that the entire British cabinet would stand or fall together. In an address in the house of commons today Asquith declared that the King had done no wrong. His remark caused an uproar among the members.

All the documents relating to the army revolt were made public by Seely today before his resignation was filed. He declared that the government reserved the right to use force in Ireland but would not use it to crush the opponents of Home Rule.

BOUNTY OF 10 CENTS OFFERED BY CHIEF FOR UNTAGGED DOGS

Novel Plan Inaugurated by Police Department for Enforcing License Ordinance.

Believing that there are quite a number of dogs in the city upon which no tax has been paid in accordance with the ordinance, Chief of Police McCord has inaugurated a novel plan which he thinks will bring results. He has given notice that he will give ten cents for each dog that is brought to the police station that does not wear a tag for 1914.

The chief makes the provision that dogs upon which the tax has been paid but for some reason are not wearing the tags will not be included in the offer. The dogs brought to the jail may be obtained by their owners upon payment of the dog tax, fifty cents penalty and twenty-five cents per day for keeping. The offer is made to boys and the chief believes that the youngsters will assist him in enforcing the ordinance. The time for taking out licenses on dogs expired March 1.

A Chance For the Boys.

I will give ten cents a head for every untagged dog delivered at the police station. Provided only, records do not show dog has been licensed and tag lost. Owner can get dog by paying 50 cents penalty, $1.00 license and 25 cents a day for keeping.

Harvey L. McCord, Chief of Police.

HOW VERGARA MET HIS DEATH; SIDE LIGHTS ON TEXAS RANGERS

THE secret entry of the Texas rangers into Mexico to recover the body of Clemente Vergara, an American ranchman of Palafox, Tex., has focused worldwide attention on this organization of border police, who are to the people on the American side of the Rio Grande what the royal northwest mounted police are to the people of northwestern Canada.

Vergara left his ranch near Palafox, Tex., on Friday, Feb. 13, and crossed the river into Mexico on receipt of a message from three federal soldiers that Captain Apolonio Rodriguez of the Hidalgo garrison wished to settle for eleven horses taken from Vergara's island pasture in the Rio Grande. Mrs. Vergara pleaded with her husband not to risk seizure by the Mexicans; but, disregarding her warnings, he crossed the river in company with his young nephew. Mrs. Vergara since has told how she saw her husband assaulted by the waiting soldiers and, after being knocked unconscious, carried off. Vergara's nephew at the time of the attack on his uncle escaped to safety and hid in the brush until he could recross the river.

Found Husband In Prison.

On the following day Mrs. Vergara went in search of her husband and found him in the Hidalgo jail. So far as known there was no charge against him. He had been cruelly beaten, according to the wife. She dressed the wounds on his head, she said, and remained with him until forced to leave. That was the last time she ever saw him alive, for early next morning he was taken from the jail, supposedly to be transferred to Piedras Negras.

When search was begun for the missing American it was learned that a man had been shot and his body hanging to a tree outside Hidalgo early Sunday morning, Feb. 15, and that the body had been left hanging for several days. Soon after the American consul at Nuevo Laredo, Mexico, started his inquiries this body was removed, and a fresh grave was noticed in the old Hidalgo cemetery.

Mexicans who had known the ranchman said that the body seen hanging was that of Vergara and that they believed he was buried in the new grave.

On Guard For Generations.

For generations the ranger has been looked upon as the main reliance of those of the American people whose homes are on the northern banks of the Rio Grande, and to the credit of these world famed frontier police it must be said they have seldom failed to make good their claim to the trust and affection of those for the protection of whom the force was created by the legislature of Texas.

In one part of his report Adjutant General Hutchins refers to the high regard in which ex-President Taft held the rangers.

"The representations," he said, "of your excellency to the president as to the value of the services the ranger force could render during the unsettled conditions on the border so appealed to the president that he agreed to recommend to congress the reimbursement to the state of the extra expense involved. This was subsequently accomplished, and the draft of the treasurer of the United States in the sum of $9,639.41 deposited to the credit of the ranger fund, known in the comptroller's office as T144. The work of the ranger force during the Reyes activities at Laredo and later the Orozco activity at El Paso was all that could be desired. There was enough good work done by all to have allowed credit to all the forces concerned, federal and state. If this credit were withheld or but grudgingly allowed to the state forces it would be a regrettable circumstance."

Rangers Crossed In 1874.

The last time Texas rangers crossed into Mexico in a manner to attract official cognizance by the United States government was in 1874. Describing this incident, Governor Colquitt in a recent telegram to Secretary Bryan asking whether he might send rangers into Mexico, used the following words: "At periods in the past commanders of American troops and of Texas rangers have crossed the border in pursuit of bandits and marauders and inflicted chastisement to them on Mexican soil. This was notably done by the Texas rangers in pursuance of an order issued by Governor Coke of Texas in 1874, and it is a coincidence that the rangers in that case were stationed in Webb county, where the most recent outrage against American citizenship was committed. With a full and fearless presentation of the facts and the rights of the state of Texas by Governor Coke to President Grant's attorney general the matter seems to have ended in acquiescence. If not with approval, on the part of the federal government in the course of the state of Texas."

Governor Colquitt did not quote any decision by the Washington authorities in the Coke case, but said Coke's order was for Texas rangers when in close pursuit of Indian and Mexican marauders to cross the Rio Grande and take them. President Grant, the governor said, objected to the order of the governor of Texas and referred it to the attorney general of the United States, with the inquiry as to how far the then governor of Texas had become liable to prosecution for violating section 6 of the act of congress of April 20, 1818. The attorney general assured the governor of Texas at that time that any reply he cared to make would be duly considered.

President Grant Objected.

Governor Colquitt then quoted Governor Coke's reply, which urged the right of Texas to capture such marauders. What reply, if any was made, was not stated.

An examination of official precedents discloses that there have been a number of cases where the civil authorities of a state of the United States invaded a foreign territory, but none in which the purpose was similar to that of the Texas rangers, who invaded Mexico for the purpose of taking away the body of an American citizen to be used as evidence that he had been murdered. In most of the cases cited the raids were for the purpose of capturing persons accused of crime in the foreign territory.

A COUNTY FAIR PRECEDENT.

Men Will Pass on the Merits of Contestants' Cake and Pie.

The management of a Missouri county fair has decided to deviate from the traditional custom this year by having men as superintendents and judges in the culinary department in place of women. It is contended that men are better judges of good cooking than women.

Another reason for the change is that in previous years the work of this department has been considerably hampered because a tribunal composed of women never could agree on which pie or cake or homemade preserve was the best.

Pay Duty on 10,000 Imported Ants. Philadelphia customs officials were puzzled how to classify a colony of 10,000 ants which arrived from London for a student of natural history at Danville, Pa. It was finally decided to classify the ants as "not especially enumerated," and a duty of 10 per cent valorem was imposed. The insects, known as amber colored meadow ants, will be used for educational purposes.

Queer Things That Turn Up In the News

Mrs. Max Sontag of 234 St. James place, Brooklyn, kept dreaming her apartment had been robbed until finally it was.

An ingenious device in the house of commons in London shows at a glance who of the members are present and to what parties they belong.

On a Wisconsin farm alarm clocks are used to awaken the ducks and chickens. The clock discharges the food into the feeding trough and starts the heating apparatus which warms the water in the swimming pool.

Burglar who robbed a Paterson (N. J.) store left behind a button of a religious society, which had bound him to be honest.

Mrs. Matilda Cornell of Yonkers, N. Y., got a court order to make her husband love her and to devote attentions to her for four days.

Auto thieves engaged in wholesale wire thefts in northern New Jersey, rolling up and carrying away miles of copper wire blown down in the storm.

The late Jacob Friday of Pittsburgh made $500,000 in the liquor business, but his will forbids any beneficiary engaging in the business. This clause started a contest.

LESSONS IN LIFE WORK.

Pupils Are Taught About Everything Pioneers Need In a New Country.

Making the grounds a miniature colony, with the pupils busily engaged in all kinds of productive occupations, is the device of the Birley House school in England, described in a bulletin issued by the United States bureau of education.

Various minerals, including coal and gold quartz, are buried in different parts of the garden, and the children go out "prospecting" for them. The finders become captains of industry. The captains engage laborers at a labor exchange, which is managed by one of the pupils. Shafts are sunk, winding apparatus is constructed, and the mineral is brought to the surface. A system of transportation in the form of a miniature railway is organized, furnaces are set up, factories are planned, the possible markets for the product are considered, and the importance of a merchant marine recognized.

An agricultural plan is developed. A miniature farm of six fields is prepared and the different methods of fencing are applied. Crops are planted in rotation—wheat, potatoes, barley, oats, clover and cabbage. A thatched log hut is built and furnished to serve as a homestead for the farmers, and the necessary outbuildings—barn, stable, wagon shed, pigsty, poultry house and dog kennel—are built around it.

Practice in woodwork and carpentry is obtained. The mixing of concrete and cement is illustrated by mason work. There is practical arithmetic in the measurement of lengths and distances, in estimating costs and quantities, in finding heights by means of simple instruments, in making records of rainfall, and in other calculations required in garden and manual work.

A VALUABLE SUGGESTION Important to Everyone.

It is now conceded by physicians that the kidneys should have more attention as they control the other organs to a remarkable degree and do a tremendous amount of work in removing the poisons and waste matter from the system by filtering the blood.

During the winter months especially, when we live an indoor life, the kidneys should receive some assistance when needed, as we take less exercise, drink less water and often eat more rich heavy food, thereby forcing the kidneys to do more work than Nature intended. Evidence of kidney trouble, such as lame back, annoying bladder troubles, smarting or burning, brick-dust or sediment, sallow complexion, rheumatism, may be weak or irregular heart action, warns you that your kidneys require help immediately to avoid more serious trouble.

Many physicians claim that an herbal medicine containing no minerals or opiates has the most healing influence. An ideal herbal compound that has had most remarkable success as a kidney and bladder remedy is Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root.

You may receive a sample bottle of Swamp-Root by Parcels Post. Address Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., and enclose ten cents; also mention the Seymour Daily Republican.

Be careful of your diet, drink plenty of hot water and breathe deeply.

Do these things and you'll dodge doctors' bills and live to a hale old age.

Sore Throat Don'ts.

When the children have sore throat, don't blister their necks with lamp oil. Don't torture them with a foul smelling piece of fat meat, wrapped about the neck. Don't imagine there is medical virtue in an old sock or piece of red flannel. Don't believe in antiquated superstitions. A sore throat is a serious matter and is not to be healed by such make-believe remedies. The use of such methods is simply putting the patient to needless torture. Use a little sore throat wisdom and give them TONSILINE and the throat will heal quickly. 25 cents and 50 cents. Hospital Size $1.00. All Druggists.

FIRST ST. PATRICK'S DAY HE CAN'T KEEP PROMISE

Cornetist Has Played at Grave of Friend For Sixteen Years.

Alvah O. Schaeffer, cornetist, of Mount Penn, Pa., who for sixteen successive St. Patrick's days played over the grave of Thomas Hannaboe in the East Reading cemetery in fulfillment of a promise made to the late Hannaboe on his deathbed, is sorrowing because sickness this year made him give up all hope of ever again fulfilling his promise.

In life almost everybody in Reading and hundreds throughout the county knew genial Tom Hannaboe. He died seventeen years ago.

One of his closest friends was Mr. Schaeffer, the cornetist and band master. Shortly before Hannaboe's death occurred he made an agreement with the cornetist that in the event of Schaeffer's death he would attend his funeral and on each St. Patrick's day at midnight would sing the "Lass of Galway" and "Nearer, My God, to Thee" over Schaeffer's grave.

The agreement was drawn up in writing and signed, and at the bottom Mr. Schaeffer wrote:

"And in case Thomas C. Hannaboe dies before I do I faithfully promise to attend his funeral and will play the same pieces over or near his grave at midnight on St. Patrick's day."

Two days before Hannaboe's death he summoned Schaeffer to his bedside and asked him if he remembered his promise. Schaeffer told the sick man that he did and assured him that it would be faithfully kept.

Cornetist Schaeffer on every St. Patrick's night ever since has played the two tunes over the Hannaboe grave, surrounded by a host of friends of both. But Mr. Schaeffer's hands, which formerly were masters of the most difficult music, are now bent and twisted, due to illness. Last year he kept his promise, but was hardly able to handle the keys of his cornet.

The hotel of Hannaboe, known as the Stars and Stripes, was one of the unusual taverns of Reading in its day. Above the door was a sign which read: "Stars and Stripes Hotel. New York Style. Step In and Step Out. Good Day, Sir. Come Again. Tom Hannaboe, Proprietor."

FOG A PANAMA MENACE.

May Hold Up Navigation In the Early Morning Hours.

Navigation of the Panama canal will have to be regularly suspended during the early morning hours, or else stringent regulations must be enforced to insure safety on account of fogs in the Culebra cut, according to Captain Hugh Rodman, U. S. N., who is slated to become superintendent of operation. It has been found that from midnight until 7 or 8 o'clock every morning heavy mists and fogs hang in the cut, which, even without the menace of fog, will be one of the most difficult parts of the canal for the pilots.

Captain Rodman has made a number of trips through the cut during these hours. He says nearly always the mist was so heavy that even his small launch had to slow down and feel its way. His explanation of the fogs is the difference between the temperature of the Chagres river as it flows out through the cut and the surrounding atmosphere.

Slang Dictionary Lunnon Used To Spoof Our Baseball Players

THE London newspapers, describing the big "match" between the Giants and White Sox, which the king attended, all say that baseball will never supplant cricket in England. It is nothing but "glo-rified rounders"—an old village game—they say. The side in the field, according to the British notion, has all the better of it. Quotations from the Daily Telegraph follow:

"A very pretty effect was produced as all four bases were connected by racing blue clad forms." (This was a homer by a Chicago man with the bags full.)

"Excitement was worked up . . . when at the end of the allotted nine innings apiece the score remained two runs, or 'scratch all,' as an American had it."

It seems that "a rare punch from Lobert" was a matter of note; also "a huge stroke" from Daly of the Sox, these both being home runs.

The Daily Express, however, beat all its rivals by having the game written in "American slang" by "an American reporter." Here are some extracts:

"Once or twice Faber and Benz, the pitchers, hurled some good stuff which made the crowd think, but mostly they kept to the good straight shots, neither too high nor too low."

"Lobert smacked a ball right across the diamond and made such a bully song of it that it plumped clean among the crowd."

"Some of the batters fanned the ball more times than I fancied."

"When a batter fans the ball four times running and has to leave it without a whack at it it makes you feel some sad."

"People seemed to be surprised when some of the batters used the southpaw and were even more struck when some of the southpaw men got in some good slogs."

"Lee Magee gave the Giants a hitch-up by doing stunts in left field."

"The shortstop buttered the ball."

The special article carried a diagram explaining the "American slang." It seems that "hitchup" means assistance, "buttered" means fumbled and "some" means a good deal.

"I never realized the great value of baseball until we made this trip," said John J. McGraw, manager of the Giants, in an interview. "It was a big undertaking, but it was worth the effort, and to say that we are satisfied is putting it mildly."

"Our greatest victory and most successful game was in London, and it was very gratifying to me when Ambassador Page said to me, 'I believe that this game has accomplished more toward getting the Americans and English together than any other thing.' That King George was so highly pleased was also of great pleasure to me. I am confident that this will lead to a future field for baseball in England."

Charles A. Comiskey, owner of the White Sox, was also very enthusiastic over the success of the trip. He said:

"I believe that the most important feature of the trip was the fact that King George came to see us play. It has been twenty-five years since the royal house of England has so honored us. This was on the occasion when the father of the present king witnessed a game in London. King George had the batting order in front of him all the time, and we learned afterward that he followed the play very closely."

THE EASIER WAY IS THE COOPERATIVE WAY

There is no royal road to business success—but some ways are easier than others.

Co-operative advertising between merchants and manufacturers in the newspapers that directly reach the buying public is the modern "Easier Way."

When the manufacturer of a nationally distributed article puts his plea for business in the newspapers of this town he is making customers for your store as well as for himself, Mr. Dealer.

The more business he can send to the store the better off he is.

Conversely, every time the merchant treats a prospective customer pleasantly, shows the advertised article, and explains its merits, he is helping the manufacturer as well as himself.

It's a fair game of push and pull.

When manufacturer and merchant work together through the columns of the local newspapers they are moving to success along the "Easier Way."

If any manufacturer who is interested in co-operative dealer work will address the Bureau of Advertising, American Newspaper Publishers Association, World Building, New York, it will be glad to answer questions. Booklet on request.

MANY REQUESTS FOR TICKETS FOR G. O. P. STATE CONVENTION

Several District Delegations Have Engaged Bands to Lead Pilgrimage to Indianapolis.

Indianapolis, March 25.—Indications are that the Republican State Convention, to be held in this city on April 22nd and 23rd, will be one of the largest and most enthusiastic in the history of the Indiana organization. Reports are coming into headquarters every day of active preparations for the pilgrimage to Indianapolis although the convention is still four weeks in the future. Some of the district delegations will come to the capital in a body headed by bands. Already Lake County has called on the State Committee to make reservations for a delegation of 75 members. In the past it has been customary for various congressional delegations to have district headquarters but this year some of the counties, realizing that in addition to their delegates they will have two or three times as many Republicans who are not delegates, are making plans for county headquarters during the convention.

Already the demand for convention seats has become insistent. It begins to look as if every voter in Indiana is anxious to have an opportunity to hear the speech before the Republican State Convention of W. A. Prendergast, comptroller of New York City, the man who made the speech in the Chicago Progressive Convention in 1912, nominating Col. Roosevelt for the presidency. Mr. Prendergast will deliver his speech at the opening session of the two days' convention, at 2:00 p. m., Wednesday, April 22.

Tickets to the convention this year will be distributed as usual, through the district and county chairmen. However, any republican in Indiana is to be given the privilege of filing his request for a convention seat direct with the Republican State Committee and he will get a seat, provided of course, his application is filed before the supply is exhausted. The seating capacity of Tomlinson Hall is large but even that auditorium has its limitations. The rule in the distribution of tickets will be "first come, first served."

Fortnightly Club.

The Baptist Fortnightly Club will give a 10 cent lunch and social at Cedar Lane, the country home of Mrs. Jerry Anderson, near Chestnut Ridge, on Tuesday, March 31st. Those desiring to go on the interurban can leave Seymour at 5 o'clock and also at 7 o'clock p. m. They will be met at Stop 76 with conveyances free of charge. Everybody is invited and especially the friends of Mrs. Anderson who live in the country.

The BUICK Always a Leader The BUICK line for 1914 covers a wide range of selection.

For a man who wants just a light runabout, there's the $950 roadster. It has a motor that's a wonder, is good looking, easy riding, and there's all kinds of power and speed.

The touring car on the same chassis is a buy that makes everybody who knows the car wonder how we do it for the money.

The B-36 roadster is the pepperyest four cylinder car you ever drove, and it has all the style that makes the people you pass take that second look. The B-37 on the same chassis has caused a bigger sensation than any other four cylinder car brought out by any concern in the past few years.

The Buick Six is a rich man's car at a business man's price. We guarantee that with five passengers, it will tour over ordinary roads on not to exceed one gallon of gasoline consumption to every fifteen miles traveled and frequent actual road tests have assured us that it is possible to get as high as 20 miles per gallon.

DEVELOPMENT OF MINERAL LANDS PROPOSED BY BILL

Consideration of Measure Started
Today by House Public Lands Committee.

Washington, March 25.—Consideration was begun today by the House Public Lands committee of another "administration" bill, that for development, free from monopoly, of coal, oil, phosphate and other mineral sources of the public domain. It provides a leasing system, excepting Alaska coal lands which are provided for in a separate measure.

Secretary of the Interior Lane who drafted the bill, was invited before the House committee today to inaugurate hearings upon it. President Wilson has given his approval in its general features. Western Senators and Representatives, who conferred with Lane, also approve the general leasing plan, which is adopted as the administration system of opening and developing Uncle Sam's resources which have been locked up tight for years.

The bill proposes that all leasing fees shall be paid to the Interior Department, half to be used in reclamation projects and the other half to be given to the states in which the leased land is situated for public schools, public works or other state improvements. For development of oil lands, the bill proposes "prospector's licenses" for limited areas up to 256 acres and, if oil is discovered, that the prospector shall receive one-fourth of the tract free for his work. A royalty of 2 cents a ton and an acreage charge of from 25 cents to $1 per acre for coal leases are provided. Stringent provisions against monopolization are included in the bill. The hearings will continue for about three weeks.

HIGH SCHOOL BUILDING AT KOKOMO TOTALLY DESTROYED

Loss is Estimated at $80,000—$150,000 Bond Issue Sold for a New Building.

By United Press.

Kokomo, Ind., March 25.—Fire completely destroyed the three-story high school building in this city early today. The building was valued at $65,000, the equipment at $10,000 and the books owned by the children at $5,000. The flames originated from escaping gas in the basement.

The school building was erected seventeen years ago and was never satisfactory for the needs. Plans for the construction of another building have been in course of preparation for some time and a bond issue of $150,000 has already been sold.

1,000 SOLDIERS ENROLLED IN ULSTER'S STANDING ARMY

Each is Lodged and Boarded and Paid $5 Per Week for Support of His Family.

By United Press.

Belfast, March 25.—More than a thousand men have been enrolled in Ulster's "standing army" since this new plan of the Home Rule resisters was sprung two weeks ago. Having completed the recruiting and organization of 100,000 men of the Volunteer Force, the leaders decided to form from their numbers the nucleus of a standing army modeled along the lines of the British regular army.

In addition to being boarded and lodged as regular soldiers they are to be paid $5 a week each, thus enabling married men who join to be assured of a constant income for their families. They are to be constantly on duty, in contradistinction to the Volunteers who are subject for the present only to call for duty or drills once or twice a week. The leaders have already arranged for barrack accommodations at convenient centers, and have been purchasing the necessary equipment. It is expected that within a month or so the three thousand men with whom it is planned to organize the corps will have been enrolled. When the appeal for the "standing army" recruits was made at a meeting of the Volunteer battalion in East Belfast 100 of the 500 present handed in their names, and similar enlistments are reported from other districts.

Gravel Expensive.

In the current issue of Farm and Fireside appears the following:

"A new side light on the high cost of live poultry has been brought to notice in New York City. Live chickens that are ravenously hungry after reaching the railroad yards are fed a paste made of gravel, sand, and ground rock, using a little sticky flour for a binder. The famished birds will greedily cram their craws with as much as a half pound of this rock ballast, which being indigestible remains in the birds' digestive tracts for days until the consumers' hands are reached. In a five-pound chicken the gravel adds about ten per cent, to the consumers' price.

"In a year the ten million pounds of sand and gravel thus cost the people of New York about $1,500,000."

Mrs. J. L. Starr, of Sparksville, spent Tuesday evening here with Miss Mabel Hodapp and went to Browns-town this morning to spend the day.

VILLA TO MOVE ON TO CAPITAL

Federals Have Lost Their Last Northern Stronghold.

TORREON IN HANDS OF REBELS

Unable Successfully to Cope With the Superior Numbers Coming Upon Them From the North, Huerta's Troops in and About Turreon Were Driven From Place to Place and at Last Overcome in the City Proper.

Gomez Palacio, Mexico, March 25.—The federal dead is reported as 700. In killed, wounded and prisoners the federals lost 1,500. The rebel loss is heavy, but believed to be less than that of the enemy. The rebel army consisted of 12,000 men and outnumbered the federals.

Mexico City, March 25.—There is no news from Turreon, as all the wires have been cut, but the government denies that there is any reason for alarm over that place, which it is claimed is impregnable.

El Vergil, Durango, Mexico, March 25.—Turreon fell at 5 o'clock last evening. General Villa has won a complete and sweeping victory. The former bandit and refugee is now the absolute master of northern Mexico. He has routed the federals to the north, scattering many of them over the United States border for their lives. He has smashed and driven everything before him, from the United States border to Turreon.

There are only meager federal forces to resist his occupation of Monterrey and Saltillo and Tampico on the east and Mazatlan on the west.

With the Huerta army under Velasquez scattered and broken beyond repair, the road to Mexico City lies open to Villa, the capital lies 600 miles to the south of him.

The federals made their last desperate stand in Turreon proper, the rebels having driven them in from all surrounding fortifications and villages. Closing in on the stronghold Monday, the rebels took Lerdo, a manufacturing town three miles from Turreon, without a fight, and yesterday morning early occupied Gomez Palacio after a furious battle that lasted for hours. Matamoros, on the southeast of Turreon, a station on the railroad leading to Saltillo, also fell into the hands of the rebels. This cut off federal communication from every direction except the south. The railroad line is open to Mexico City, so far as is known.

Gomez Palacio was taken by a command under Pancho Villa himself, who then headed the triumphant assault upon Turreon proper. Lerdo fell into the hands of Tomas Urbino's command advancing from the vicinity of Mapimi. Matamoros fell into the hands of a rebel brigade sent south from Tlahualilo by rail, which was not impeded. The troops at Matamoros fell back toward Turreon when the rebels neared the place. Then the rebels turned northwest into Turreon along this railroad. Urbino was unable to accompany his command, as he is wounded or ill in Mapimi. Gomez Palacio fell into the hands of rebels when the Huerta garrison, reinforced strongly from Turreon, in personal command of General Velasquez, retreated into Turreon for the final stand and left the suburb three miles out in the hands of the rebels.

It was nearly daybreak yesterday when the federals retired to Turreon and burned their bridges. Villa, however, nothing deterred, brought his forces up and, fording the Nazas to the east of Gomez, entered upon the assault on Turreon, leaving only a comparatively small force of men in Gomez Palacio.

CHILD'S WONDERFUL ESCAPE

Three-Year-Old Boy Has Thrilling Experience With Train.

Bourbon, Ind., March 25.—Carl Sharp, the three-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Marion Sharp, was playing around the Pennsylvania yards near his home and climbed on the rear step of an engine coupled to a train of freight cars. The trainmen failed to notice his little passenger and pulled out with him on board.

Two miles west of Bourbon the train had gained considerable speed and the little boy was shaken off. He fell between the rails and the entire train passed over him. The wheels of one of the cars ran over his hand and severed three of his little fingers. He was not discovered until he had walked more than a mile toward his home. He was covered with blood and was staggering from weakness.

GROWING OPPOSITION TO THE REPEAL BILL

Administration Leaders Are Becoming Alarmed.

Washington, March 25.—The fate of the president's bill proposing the repeal of the free tolls clause in the Panama canal act is giving administration leaders no end of worry. Outwardly the administration supporters continue to express confidence in the result, but the fact is that too many Democrats in the house and senate are wobbling to make the situation comfortable for the president and his advisers.

The strength of the undercurrent against the legislation was indicated clearly when Representative R. Mitchell Palmer of Pennsylvania, who will lead the administration fight for the repeal of the free toll provision, issued a statement outlining the reasons why Democrats in congress should stand steadfastly behind the president.

The way in which the opposition to the president's program is growing is illustrated by the experience of Representative Stone of Illinois, a Democrat, who has been counted on to support the administration. Mr. Stone submitted the question to his constituents, having sent out 3,000 letters in an effort to ascertain the sentiment in his district. Ninety per cent of the replies received expressed opposition to the administration bill. Other Democrats are hearing from their districts, and, according to their statements, the sentiment back home seems in most cases to be gathering strength against the administration's proposal. Some indication of the inroad that has been made on the president's strength in the house has been shown by the fact that a week or two ago the Wilson leaders were saying that the repeal would be passed by a majority of 150. Now their estimates have dropped as low as fifty.

TERSE TELEGRAMS

Abdul Hamid, the deposed sultan of Turkey, is again reported dead. It is known that he is certainly near his end.

Martial law has been declared at Depew, a suburb of Buffalo, on account of a strike in the Gould coupler works there.

The date of the Indiana Progressive state convention again has been changed. It will be held at Indianapolis Saturday, April 18.

The habitual criminal act, carrying a penalty of life imprisonment, has been upheld by the supreme court of appeals of West Virginia.

The twenty-seven rebels who crossed the Rio Grande from Las Vegas to Del Rio, will be interned in the bull pen at Fort Bliss which was built for General Salazar.

Pancho Villa took forty gamecocks with him when he left Chihuahua for Turreon, and he declared that he would celebrate his capture of Turreon with cock fighting for his men in the principal pleasure places.

The West Virginia supreme court of appeals has decided that E. Graham Wilson, a wealthy farmer of Charleston, W. Va., must serve a fourteen-year sentence for a crime against Miss Kate Turner, who was a guest at his country home.

Conditions on the Monongahela branch of the Pennsylvania railroad, where a strike of train and switching crews has been in progress for several days, have improved but little despite the efforts of the officials to make up their crews with men imported from other cities.

ASQUITH FACES CABINET CRISIS

British Ministry Is Said to Be Doomed.

REVOLT OVER ARMY QUESTION

The Whole of the Extremist Section, Heretofore Parliamentary Followers of the Premier, Is Infuriated at What They Regard as the Government's Surrender to the King and the Army.

Belfast, March 25.—There was a clash here between Orange and Irish Nationalist crowds early this morning. Several persons, including two women, were injured by stones. Several revolver shots were fired. Some arrests were made.

London, March 25.—The army crisis over the mobilization of the army in Ulster has developed into a ministerial one. Nothing is talked of at the political clubs or in political circles but the question: Will the government outside the tēpest which was raised by their treatment of the Irish command? The answer which was given by many experienced observers is that the cabinet is doomed.

It is practically certain that Colonel J. E. B. Seeley, the secretary of war, has resigned, although his resignation has not yet been accepted. The cabinet, which will discuss his retirement today, is likely to take other most important decisions.

There is unquestionably a serious revolt among Premier Asquith's parliamentary followers. The whole of the extremist section, including Lloyd George Radicals, the Laborites and the Socialists, is infuriated at what they regard as the government's surrender to the king and the army. Officers' privilege is declared to have been set up against the democracy and the democracy is foaming with rage.

The excitement in the lobbies of the house of commons has been unprecedented in years. The revolt has exchanged among themselves criticisms of Premier Asquith and the moderate section of the cabinet in a manner which showed that allegiance to the premier is ended unless the suspicions of the dissidents is disproved in parliament.

The Fat in the Fire.

If the promised ministerial statement substantiates what is already practically certain that Brigadier General Gough, commander of the Third cavalry brigade at the Curragh camp, who resigned and was afterward reinstated, practically took back to Curragh a written assurance that his command would not be used to coerce Ulster, the fat would be in the fire at once.

A striking indication of the exasperation of the extremists was given when in the course of yesterday's debate in the house of commons Mr. Ward said: "We have to decide whether the people through their parliamentary representatives are to make the laws absolutely without interference either by the king or the army."

Viewed from the standpoint of parliamentary custom it was an exceedingly daring thing thus to allude to the sovereign, but the remarks of Mr. Ward instantly drew an outburst of wild, excited cheering from the ministerial benches such as no living member of parliament remembers.

The new issue completely dwarfs the home rule and Ulster question and brings into instant prominence the question of the king's prerogative. It is yet to be proved that the king's influence swayed the government. Another explanation is that a large number of high officials in the war office threatened to resign if the Irish officers who had resigned their commissions were penalized and that many military resignations at Aldershot and elsewhere would follow, but the belief which has engaged the Radicals is that the king is mainly responsible for the action of the government.

BOY PUT UP A NASTY FIGHT

Battled Police With Bullets For Nearly an Hour.

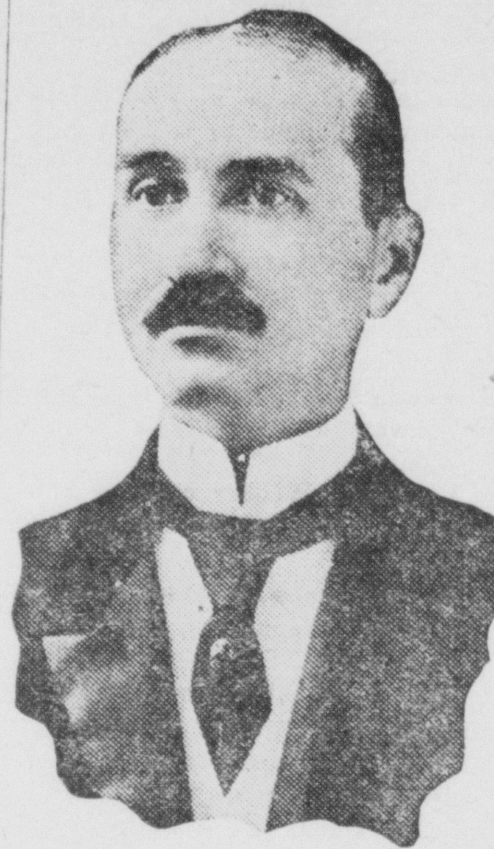

Terre Haute, Ind., March 25.—After a battle with the police, which lasted forty-five minutes, after he had been caught in the gun shop of Edward Tetz, Ernest McWilliams, a fifteen-year-old boy, surrendered to the police. He had been wounded in six places.

The boy was caught in the store by passing policemen, who called for reinforcements, and then demanded that McWilliams surrender. He replied with a fusillade of shots, which was answered by the police.

The boy, barricaded in an automobile in the rear of the store, kept up an incessant firing. Every window in the store was shot out, the bullets from the policeman's guns wrecking the machine in which the boy hid, and finally, with blood streaming from many wounds, the boy screamed that he would surrender, and marched from the store holding his hands above his head. The boy is supposed to have entered the place for the purpose of theft. He loaded a number of guns, and five loaded revolvers were found in his pockets when he surrendered.

Renominated by Acclamation.

Bluffton, Ind., March 25.—John A. M. Adair of Portland was nominated as the Democratic candidate for congressman of the Eighth congressional district for the fifth time here. He had no opposition.

JAPANESE NEWS NOT VERY WELL RECEIVED

Washington Concerned Over the Cabinet Crisis.

Washington, March 25.—With some uneasiness news of the resignation of the Japanese cabinet was received here. A change of government in Japan at this time is regarded as very undesirable from the viewpoint of the United States because of the political capital the opposition made out of the failure of the late ministry to press more vigorously the California land controversy.

The resignation of the Japanese cabinet, while technically due to the failure of the parliament to pass the naval budget, really had its cause in matters of much greater significance. The downfall of the Katsura government a year ago, followed by that of Yamamoto means that the Japanese intend to reduce the power of the aristocracy in the government and weaken the hold of groups of great families upon the army, navy and bureaus of the administration.

The tide of opposition against the Yamamoto ministry set in almost simultaneously with the inception of the controversy between the United States and Japan over the passage of the alien land law in California. The failure of Japan after long negotiations to obtain any satisfaction from the United States last fall gave new impetus to the opposition. Then came the so-called naval scandal, in which a number of high officers of the navy were accused of receiving bribes or commissions from foreign firms, principally German, engaged in government contracts. This provided just the issue the opposition was seeking and in recent weeks the battle has been fought out on this line rather than on the basis of the California controversy.

It is now feared the new government, which of course will represent more or less the opposition that stirred up the agitation over the California controversy, will feel itself obliged to renew pressure on the United States for settlement. As the matter stands today both sides are remaining on their original ground in the controversy, and there is not now the slightest prospect of the United States doing anything for Japan.

His Absence Unaccounted For.

Bluffton, Ind., March 25.—The police of northern Indiana cities are searching for Bert Chipman, age twenty-six, a Wells county farmer, who disappeared one week ago after coming to Bluffton and drawing $75 from a local bank. The wife and two children can give no reason for the man's absence from home.

Richmond Goes "Wet."

Richmond, Ind., March 25.—Richmond was voted "wet" yesterday by the decisive majority of 1,339, twenty-two of the thirty precincts being carried by the "wets."

MINES FACING LABOR CRISIS

Wage Scale Conference Has Proved Futile.

BOTH SIDES REMAINED FIRM

With the Present Wage Agreement Expiring Next Week and No Understanding Under Which Men Have Agreed to Work, Policy Committee Will Seek to Provide a Way to Avert Strike in Bituminous Fields.

Chicago, March 25.—Flat declaration of the United Mine Workers to accept the terms offered by the bituminous coal mine owners of western Pennsylvania, Ohio, Indiana and Illinois brought to an end here the joint wage scale conference of the men and employers.

Although the present wage agreement expires April 1, and there is no understanding at present under which the men have agreed to continue work, union leaders say that a strike is not imminent.

The policy committee of the United Mine Workers is in session here today, and the men's leaders announce that they expect it to decide upon a line of action that will prevent a labor crisis in the mines. The operators state that the next proposition must come from the men.

"This does not necessarily mean a strike," said William Green, secretary of the United Mine Workers. "The miners' representatives have worked hard in the interest of peace. We will certainly use our best endeavors to outline a policy that will mean continuance of work. Only a small difference separated us from the operators at our last meeting. When we have agreed upon our policy we will submit terms to the operators, but it is not expected that we will meet them again at this time in joint four-states committee."

Mr. Green said that the miners modified their terms so that they were willing to accept the agreement in force with the modification that local conditions in different mining districts should be subject to adjustment. The operators, he said, would not assent to this.

The joint committee of the operators and miners discussed their differences for several hours. After recess they met again for a few minutes and the miners definitely rejected the operators' terms, which were to continue under the same terms as are now in force. The meeting then adjourned finally.

OLD GANG IS BACK AT WORK

"Shove and Rob" Streetcar Thieves Get Busy Again.

Hammond, Ind., March 25.—What are known as "shove and rob" streetcar thieves robbed John Minas, a merchant, of $3,000 in cash and checks on a Sixty-third street and Hammond car. Three other victims reported loss of wallets. This is held by the police as a sure sign of spring. Last year a gang committed robberies amounting to $10,000 in the Calumet region. Two thieves work together on crowded cars, one standing in front of a victim and the other behind. In the last three years eighty-four people have been robbed on Chicago and Hammond streetcars and not a single arrest has been made.

Expelled From the Ministry.

Bloomington, Ind., March 25.—Rev. John R. Ellis, former pastor of the First Presbyterian church here, who resigned recently after his conduct with women had been investigated, was found guilty of conduct unbecoming a minister and expelled from the ministry by the committee appointed by the presbytery, which recently held a secret hearing of the case at Martinsville.

Caught at the Crossing.

Bedford, Ind., March 25.—Cyrus Blackburn, sixty years old, one of the most widely known farmers in Lawrence county, was struck on the R street crossing of the Southeastern line by a fast passenger train and was instantly killed. He was driving a team, which became unmanageable, and his death resulted.

Ringleaders Were Fined.

South Bend, Ind., March 25.—Five of the twenty-four defendants alleged to have been ringleaders in the riot at St. Casimir's Polish Roman Catholic church Feb. 15, when an attempt was made to install a priest of the Holy Cross order, were found guilty by Judge Slick and fined $25 and costs each.

Wanted to Tell His Own Story.

Connersville, Ind., March 25.—Ivy L. Reynolds, husband of the woman whose body was exhumed last week by order of the grand jury, appeared before the grand jury by his own request. The grand jury still is investigating the woman's death.

The Deadly Live Wire.

Rushville, Ind., March 25.—William Hood, age fifty, a lineman, employed by the Witters Electric company, of Milroy, eight miles south of here, was killed when working on a pole. He grasped a wire carrying 2,300 volts.

RALPH W. MOSS

Fifth District Congressman
Renominated by Acclamation.

Terre Haute, Ind., March 25.—There was no opposition to the renomination of Ralph W. Moss as Democratic candidate for representative from the Fifth district at the convention here.

A TENTATIVE LIST OF THE RESERVE CITIES

Committee Has Practically Completed its Deliberations.

Washington, March 25.—The federal reserve system's organization committee of three has practically completed its work. The committee, which consists of Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo, Secretary of Agriculture Houston and Comptroller of the Currency Williams, probably will announce in a few days, perhaps before the end of this week, the boundaries of the federal reserve districts and the cities in which are to be located the reserve banks.

The committee has decided, it is understood, to name twelve federal reserve districts, which is the highest number it may designate under the Glass-OWen law.

Upon reliable authority respondent is able to present the tentative list of federal reserve cities as follows:

Boston, New York, Philadelphia, Washington or Richmond, Chicago, St. Louis, San Francisco, Kansas City, Cincinnati, Atlanta or New Orleans, Dallas or Houston, and Minneapolis.

The committee, it is expected will call upon President Wilson one day this week and lay before him the results of their deliberations. The president some time ago let it be known that he expected to be consulted by the committee before the reserve districts and cities were announced.

Will Reopen Frank Case.

Washington, March 25.—The case of Leo M. Frank, condemned to death for the murder of Mary Phagan, the Atlanta factory girl, has been absolutely cleared up, say the detectives, who declare there is sufficient new evidence to remove any doubt as to how and by whom the young girl was murdered when the facts are brought out at a new trial.

The site of Dyea, Alaska, which in the days of the Klondike boom had a population of 20,000, has been filed on as farming land.

CHAPTER XIII.

The Second Encounter.

Booth trudged rapidly homeward after leaving Hetty at the lodge. He was throbbing all over with the love of her. The thrill of conquest was in his blood. She had raised a mysterious barrier; all the more zest to the inevitable victory that would be his. He would delight in overcoming obstacles—the bigger the better—for his heart was valiant and the prize no smaller than those which the ancient knights went out to battle for in the lists of love.

It was enough for the present to know that she loved him.

What if she were Hetty Glynn? What if she had been an artist's model? The look he had had into the soul of her through those pure blue eyes was all-conquering. She was worthy of the noblest love.

After luncheon—served with some exasperation by Patrick an hour and a half later than usual—he smoked his pipe on the porch and stared reminiscently at the shifting clouds above the tree tops.

He did not see the Wrاندall motor at his garden gate until a lusty voice brought him down from the clouds into the range of earthly sounds. Then he dashed out to the gate, bareheaded and careless, forgetting that he had been sitting in the obscurity of trailing vines and purple blossoms the while he thought of her.

Leslie was sitting on the wide seat between his mother and sister.

"Glad to see you back, old man," said Booth, reaching in to shake hands with him. "Day early, aren't you? Good afternoon, Mrs. Wrاندall. Won't you come in?"

He looked at Vivian as he gave the invitation.

"No, thanks," she replied. "Won't you come to dinner this evening?"

He hesitated. "I'm not quite sure whether I can, Vivian. I've got a half-way sort of—"

"Oh, do, old chap," cut in Leslie, more as a command than an entreaty.

"Sorry I can't be there myself, but you'll fare quite as well without me. I'm dining at Sara's. Wants my private ear about one thing and another—see what I mean?"

"We shall expect you, Brandon," said Mrs. Wrاندall, fixing him with her lorgnette.

"I'll come, thank you," said he.

He felt disgustingly transparent under that inquisitive glass.

Wrاندall stepped out of the car. "I'll stop off for a chat with Brandy, mother."

"Shall I send the car back, dear?"

"Never mind. I'll walk down."

The two men turned in at the gate as the car sped away.

"Well," said Booth, "it's good to see you. Pat!" He called through a basement window. "Come up and take the gentleman's order."

"No drink for me, Brandy. I've been in the temperance state of Maine for two weeks. One week more of it and I'd have been completely pickled. I shall always remember Maine."

Booth sat down on the porch rail, hooked his toes in the supports and proceeded to fill his pipe. Then he struck a match and applied it, Leslie watching him with moody eyes.

"How do you like the portrait, old man?" he inquired between punctuating puffs.

"It's bully. Sargent never did anything finer. Rippling."

"I owe it all to you, Les."

"To me?"

"You induced her to sit to me."

"So I did," said Leslie sourly. "I was Mr. Fix-it sure enough." He allowed a short interval to elapse before taking the plunge. "I suppose, old chap, if I should happen to need your valuable services as best man in the near future, you'd not disappoint me?"

Booth eyed him quizzically. "I trust you're not throwing yourself away, Les," he said drily. "I mean to say, on some one—well, some one not quite up to the mark."

Leslie regarded him with some severity. "Of course not, old chap. What the devil put that into your head?"

"I thought that possibly you'd been making a chump of yourself up in the Maine woods."

"Piffle! Don't be an ass. What's the sense pretending you don't know who she is?"

"I suppose it's Hetty Castleton," said Booth, puffing away at his pipe. "Who else?"

"Think she'll have you, old man?" asked Booth, after a moment.

"I don't know," replied the other, a bit dashed. "You might wish me luck, though."

Booth knocked the burnt tobacco from the bowl of his pipe. A serious line appeared between his eyes. He was a fair-minded fellow, without guile, without a single treacherous instinct.

"I can't wish you luck, Les," he said slowly. "You see I'm—I'm in love with her myself."

"The devil!" Leslie sat bolt upright and glared at him. "I might have known! And—and is she in love with you?"

"My dear fellow, you reveal considerable lack of tact in asking that question."

"What I want to know is this," exclaimed Wrاندall, very pale but very hot: "is she going to marry you?"

Booth smiled. "I'll be perfectly frank with you. She says she won't."

Leslie gulped. "So you've asked her?"

"Obviously."

"And she said she wouldn't? She refused you? Turned you down?" His little mustache shot up at the ends and a joyous, triumphant laugh broke

"Tell Me—Tell Me, Now—on Your Soul, Hetty—"

from his lips. "Oh, this is rich! Ha, ha! Turned you down, eh? Poor old Brandy! You're my best friend, and dammit I'm sorry. I mean to say," he went on in some embarrassment, "I'm sorry for you. Of course, you can hardly expect me to—"

"Certainly not," accepted Booth amiably. "I quite understand."

"Then, since she's refused you, you might wish me better luck."

"That would mean giving up hope."

"Hope?" exclaimed Leslie quickly. "You don't mean to say you'll annoy her with your—"

"No, I shall not annoy her," replied his friend, shaking his head.

"Well, I should hope not," said Leslie with a scowl. "Turned you down, eh? 'Pon my soul!" He appeared to be relishing the idea of it.

"Sorry, old chap, but I suppose you understand just what that means."

Booth's lips hardened for an instant, then relaxed into a queer, almost pitying smile.

"And you want me to be your best man?" he said reflectively.

Leslie arose. His chest seemed to swell a little; assuredly he was breathing much easier. He assumed an air of compassion.

"I shan't insist, old fellow, if you feel you'd rather not—er— See what I mean?" It then occurred to him to utter a word or two of kindly advice.

"I shouldn't go on moping if I were you, Brandy. 'Pon my soul, I shouldn't. Take it like a man. I know it hurts, but— Pooh! What's the use aggravating the pain by butting against a stone wall?"

His companion looked out over the tree tops, his hands in his trousers pockets, and it must be confessed that his manner was not that of one who is oppressed by despair.

"I think I'm taking it like a man, Les," he said. "I only hope you'll take it as nicely if she says nay to you."

An uneasy look leaped into Leslie's face. He seemed noticeably less complacent about the chest. He wondered if Booth knew anything about his initial venture. A question rose to his lips, but he thought quickly and held it back. Instead, he glanced at his watch.

"I must be off. See you tomorrow, I hope."

"So long," said Booth, stopping at the top of the steps while his visitor skipped down to the gate with a nimbleness that suggested the formation of a sudden resolve.

Leslie did not waste time in parting inanities he strode off briskly in the direction of home, but not without a furtive glance out of the tail of his eye as he disappeared beyond the hedgerow at the end of Booth's garden. That gentleman was standing where he had left him, and was filling his pipe once more.

The day was warm, and Leslie was in a dripping perspiration when he reached home. He did not enter the house but made his way direct to the garage.

"Get out the car at once, Brown," was his order.

Three minutes later he was being driven over the lower road toward Southlook, taking good care to avoid Booth's place by the matter of a mile or more. He was in a fever of hope and eagerness. It was very plain to him why she had refused Booth. The iron was hot. He didn't intend to lose any time in striking.

And now we know why he came again to Sara's in the middle of a blazing afternoon. Instead of waiting until the more seductive shades of night had fallen, when the moon sat serene in the seat of the Mighty.

He didn't have to wait long for Hetty. Up to the instant of her appearance in the door, he had reveled in the thought that the way was now paved with roses. But with her entrance, he felt his confidence and courage slipping. Perhaps that may explain the abruptness with which he proceeded to go about the business in hand.

"I couldn't wait till tonight," he explained as she came slowly across the room toward him. She was halfway to him before he awoke to the fact that he was standing perfectly still. Then he started forward, somehow impelled to meet her at least halfway. "You'll forgive me, Hetty, if I have disturbed you."

"I was not lying down, Mr. Wrاندall," she said quietly. There was nothing ominous in the words, but he experienced a sudden sensation of cold. "Won't you sit down? Or would you rather go out to the terrace?"

"It's much more comfortable here, if you don't mind. I—I suppose you know what it is I want to say to you. You—"

"Yes," she interrupted wearily; "and knowing as much, Mr. Wrاندall, it would not be fair of me to let you go on."

"Not fair?" he said, in honest amazement. "But, my dear, I—"

"Please, Mr. Wrاندall," she exclaimed, with a pleading little smile that would have touched the heart of anyone but Leslie. "Please don't go on. It is quite as impossible now as it was before. I have not changed."

He could only say, mechanically: "You haven't?"

"No. I am sorry if you have thought that I might come to—"

"Think, for heaven's sake, think what you are doing!" he cried, feeling for the edge of the table with a support-seeking hand. "I—I had Sara's word that you were not—"

"Unfortunately Sara cannot speak for me in a matter of this kind. Thank you for the honor you would—"

"Honor be hanged!" he blurted out, losing his temper. "I love you! It's a purely selfish thing with me, and I'm bleated if I consider it an honor to be refused by any woman. I—"

"Mr. Wrاندall!" she cried, fixing him with her flashing, indignant eyes. "You are forgetting yourself."

She was standing very straight and slim and imperious before him.

He quailed. "I—I beg your pardon, I—"

"There is nothing more to be said," she went on icily. "Goodbye."

"Would you mind telling me whether there is anyone else?" he asked, as he turned toward the door.

"Do you really feel that you have the right to ask that question, Mr. Wrاندall?"

He wet his lips with his tongue. "Then, there is some one!" he cried, rapping the table with his knuckles. He didn't realize till afterward how vigorously he rapped. "Some confounded English nobody, I suppose."

She smiled, not unkindly. "There is no English nobody, if that answers your question."

"Then, will you be kind enough to offer a reason for not giving me a fair chance in a clear field? I think it's due—"

"Can't you see how you are distressing me? Must I again go through that horrid scene in the garden? Can't you take a plain no for an answer?"

"Good Lord!" he gasped, and in those two words he revealed the complete overturning of a lifelong estimate of himself. It seemed to take more than his breath away.

"Goodbye," she said with finality.

He stared at the door through which she disappeared, his hopes, his conceit, his self-regard trailing after her with shameless disloyalty to the standards he had set for them, and then, with a rather ghastly smile of self-commiseration on his lips, he slipped out of the house, jumped into the motor car, and gave a brief but explicit command to the chauffeur, who lost no time in assisting his master.

Leslie sat bolt upright and glared at him.

ter to turn tail in ignominious flight.

Hetty was gloomily but resolutely employed in laying out certain of her personal belongings, preparatory to packing them for departure, when Sara entered her room.

They regarded each other steadily, questioning for a short space of time.

"Leslie has just called up to ask 'what the devil' I meant by letting him make a fool of himself," said Sara, with a peculiar little twisted smile on her lips.

Hetty offered no comment, but after a moment gravely and rather wistfully called attention to her present occupation by a significant faunt of her hand and a saddened smile.

"I see," said Sara, without emotion. "If you choose to go, Hetty, I shall not oppose you."

"My position here is a false one, Sara. I prefer to go."

"This morning I should have held a sword over your head."

"It is very difficult for me to realize all that has happened."

"You are free to depart. You are free in every sense of the word. Your future rests with yourself, my dear."

"It hurts me more than I can tell to feel that you have been hating me all these months."

"If hurts me—now."

Hetty walked to the window and looked out.

"What are your plans?" Sara inquired, after an interval.

"I shall seek employment—and wait for you to act."

"I? You mean?"

"I shall not run away, Sara. Nor do I intend to reveal myself to the authorities. I am not morally guilty of crime. A year ago I feared the consequences of my deed, but I have learned much since then. I was a stranger in a new world. In England we have been led to believe that you lynch women here as readily as you lynch men. I now know better than that. From you alone I learned my greatest lesson. You revealed to me the true meaning of human kindness. You shielded me who should not. Even now I believe that your first impulse was a tender one. I shall not forget it, Sara. You will live to regret the baser thought that came later on. I have loved you—yes, almost as a good dog loves his master. It is not for me to tell the story of that night and all these months to the world. I would not be betraying myself, but you. You would be called upon to explain, not I. And you would be the one to suffer. When you met me on the road that night I was on my way back to the inn to give myself into custody. You have made it impossible for me to do so now. My lips are sealed. It rests with you, Sara."

Sara joined her in the broad window. There was a strangely exalted look in her face. A gilded birdcage hung suspended in the casement. Without a word, she threw open the window screen. The gay little canary in the gilded cage cocked his head and watched her with alert eyes. Then she reached up and gently removed the cage from its fastenings. Putting it down upon the window sill, she opened the tiny door. The bird hopped about his prison in a state of great excitement.

Hetty looked on, fascinated.

At last a yellow streak shot out through the open door and an instant later resolved itself into the bobbing, fluttering dicky-bird that had lived in a cage all its life without an hour of freedom. For a few seconds it circled over the tree tops and then alighted on one of the branches. One might well have imagined that he could hear its tiny heart beating with terror. Its wings were half-raised and fluttering, its head jerking from side to side in wild perturbation. Taking courage, Master Dicky hopped timorously to a nearby twig, and then ventured a flight to a tree top nearer the window casement. Perched in its topmost branches he cheeped shrilly, as if there was fear in his little breast.

In silence the two women in the window watched the agitated movements of the bird. The same thought was in the mind of each, the same question, the same intense wish.

A brown thrush sped through the air, close by the timid canary. Like a flash it dropped to the twigs lower down, its wings palpitating in violent alarm.

"Dicky!" called Sara Wrاندall, and then cheeped between her teeth.

A moment later Dicky was fluttering about the eaves; his circles grew smaller, his winging less rhythmical, till at last with a nervous little flutter he perched on the top of the window shutter, so near that they might have reached to him with their hands. He sat there with his head cocked to one side.

"Dicky!" called Sara again. This time she held out her finger. For some time she regarded it with indifference, not to say disfavor. Then he took one more flight, but much shorter than the first, bringing up again at the shutter-top. A second later he hopped down and his little talons gripped Sara's finger with an earnestness that left no room for doubt.

She lowered her hand until it was even with the open door of the gilded cage. He shot inside with a whir that suggested a scramble. With his wings folded, he sat on his little trapeze and cheeped. She closed and fastened the door, and then turned to Hetty.

"My symbol," she said softly.

There were tears in Hetty's eyes.

Leslie did not turn up at his father's place in the High street that night until Booth was safely out of the way. He spent a dismal evening at the boat club.

His father and mother were in the library when he came home at half-past ten. From a dark corner of the garden he had witnessed Booth's early departure. Vivian had gone down to the gate in the low-lying hedge with her visitor. She came in a moment after Leslie's entrance.

"Hello, Les," she said, bending an inquiring eye upon him. "Isn't this early for you?"

Her brother was standing near the fireplace.

"There's a heavy dew falling, Mater," he said gruffly. "Shan't I touch a match to the kindling?"

His mother came over to him quickly, and laid her hand on his arm.

"Your coat is damp," she said anxiously. "Yes, light the fire."

"It's very warm in this room," said Mr. Wrاندall, looking up from his book. They were always doing something for Leslie's comfort.

No one seemed to notice him. Leslie knelt and struck a match.

"Well!" said Vivian.

"Well what?" he demanded without looking up.

His sister took a moment for thought. "Is Hetty coming to stay with us in July?"

Old Time Sores And Ulcers Healed

Old Wounds Often Bother Many Years After.

People who have been pouting and anointing an old sore for years and years marvel at the way it heals quickly after using S. S. S.

When you come to realize that the skin and the flesh beneath are composed of a network of tiny blood vessels you solve the mystery.

There are wonderful medicinal properties in S. S. S. that follow the course of the blood streams just as naturally as the most nourishing food elements.

It is really a remarkable remedy. It contains one ingredient, the active purpose of which is to stimulate the tissues to the healthy selection of its own essential nutriment. And the medicinal elements of this matchless blood purifier are just as essential to well-balanced health as the nutritious elements of the meats, grains, fats and sugars of our daily food.

Not one drop of minerals or drugs is used in its preparation. Ask for S. S. S. and just insist upon having it. And if you desire skillful advice and counsel upon any matter concerning the blood and skin, write to the medical department, The Swift Specific Co., 210 Swift Laboratory, Atlanta, Ga.

Do not allow some zealous clerk to larrup the atmosphere in eloquence over something "just as good" as S. S. S. Beware of all substitutes.

He stood erect, first rubbing his knee to dislodge the dust—then his palms.

"No, she isn't coming," he said. He drew a very long breath—the first in several hours—and then expelled it vocally. "She has refused to marry me."

Mr. Wrاندall turned a leaf in his book; it sounded like the crack of doom, so still had the room become.

Vivian had the forethought to push a chair toward her mother. It was a most timely act on her part, for Mrs. Wrاندall sat down very abruptly and very limply.

"She—what?" gasped Leslie's mother.

"Turned me down—cold," said Leslie briefly.

Mr. Wrاندall laid his book on the table without thinking to put the bookmark in place. Then he arose and removed his glasses, fumbling for the case.

"She—she—what?" he demanded. "Sacked me," replied his son.

"Please do not jest with me, Leslie," said his mother, trying to smile.

"He isn't joking, mother," said Vivian, with a shrug of her fine shoulders.

"He—he must be," cried Mrs. Wrاندall impatiently. "What did she really say, Leslie?"

"The only thing I remember was 'goodbye,'" said he, and then blew his nose violently.

"Poor old Les!" said Vivian, with real feeling.

"It was Sara Gooch's doing!" exclaimed Mrs. Wrاندall, getting her breath at last.

"Nonsense," said Mr. Wrاندall, picking up his book once more and turning to the place where the bookmark lay, after which he proceeded to re-read four or five pages before discovering his error.

No one spoke for a matter of five minutes or more. Then Mrs. Wrاندall got up, went over to the library table and closed with a snap the bulky blue book with the limp leather cover, saying as she held it up to let him see that it was the privately printed history of the Murgatroyd family:

"It came by post this evening from London. She is merely a fourth cousin, my son."

He looked up with a gleam of interest in his eye.

SPECIAL TO WOMEN

The most economical, cleansing and germicidal of all antiseptics is

Paxtine

A soluble Antiseptic Powder to be dissolved in water as needed.

As a medicinal antiseptic for douches in treating catarrh, inflammation or ulceration of nose, throat, and that caused by feminine ills it has no equal. For ten years the Lydia E. ### SOCIAL EVENTS.

S. S. SOCIAL EVENING.
The First Baptist Sunday School was host Tuesday evening to the Sunday School workers and friends of the city. An address was made by Rev. F. E. Taylor, D. D. of Indianapolis. Dr. Taylor is a clear thinker and a forceful speaker. He emphasized the needs of the Sunday School teacher as knowledge, love for the work, insight into the needs of the pupils and belief in the power of God to save them. The opening prayer was made by Rev. W. A. Schruoff, pastor of the German M. E. church and after the address a ladies' quartet composed of Mrs. Fannie Reynolds, Mrs. D. L. Thomas, Mrs. C. R. Hoffmann and Miss Edna Doane rendered an excellent selection. The evening closed with a social hour during which refreshments were served.

SURPRISE PARTY.
Mrs. Archie Adams was given a pleasant surprise Tuesday evening by a number of her neighbors and friends, who called at her home to remind her of the birthday anniversary. A taffy pull was enjoyed in the early part of the evening and later the guests went to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Chasteen and spent the remainder of the evening with music. Those present were Mr. and Mrs. Will Lemp, Mr. and Mrs. George Bird, Mr. and Mrs. George Ahl and daughters, Miss Inez and Ola, Mrs. Basil Owens, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Chasteen, Mrs. Edna Pheasant, Mrs. Mabel Peacock, Misses Margaret and Rosa Kendall, Emma Smith and Stella Gilbert.

WEDDING ANNIVERSARY.
Dr. and Mrs. D. L. Robeson celebrated the fifth anniversary of their marriage Tuesday and in the evening Mrs. Robeson was hostess to the members of the Loyal Devoir Society of the Christian church. The society which was divided into two sections "red" and "white" has been in a contest since the first of the year and closed with the meeting last night. It was very successful. The color scheme of red and white was carried out in the decorations and refreshments. A delightful evening was enjoyed.

AVERAGE RETURN FROM RENTED FARMS IS 3½ PER CENT.

Average Labor Income of Tenants is $870 According to Bulletin of Agricultural Department.

By United Press.
Washington, March 25.—Popular belief that the farm owner who lives in the city and rents his farm is in the class with wealthy plutocrats was given a severe jolt in a bulletin just received by the Department of Agriculture which shows that the average return from rented farms is but three and one-half per cent. on the investment. The size of the farm seems to have no effect on the percentage.

The bureau of farm management which developed those facts studied several hundred farms in Indiana, Illinois and Iowa. States in the corn belt were chosen because they excel almost all other regions in wealth of farm products. In this section modern machinery, with more horses and fewer men, has made the farm less than 100 acres an "efficient unit". Further readjustments are constantly taking place tending to lessen the number of persons needed and to increase the net products of the farm. The average labor income of the farm owners operating their own farms was $408 for the year studied, and $870 for the tenants. These figures are obtained by deducting 5 per cent of the capital investment from the net income. As the tenant has a smaller capital investment his labor income is proportionately larger.

Strangely enough the farmers making the lowest labor incomes are on big farms, but they fail through inefficient management. Poor crops, low prices for products sold, poor stock, failure to work and unused capital are given as the main causes contributing to their failure. The income of the farmer who owns his farm is in direct proportion to his capital and the size of his farm. Men owning small farms often materially increase their incomes by renting additional land. The tenant's income is in direct proportion to the risk he assumes. On the cash rent basis his income is greater in a good year and less in a poor year than when he rents on the share basis. Approximately one-third of the total farm expense is for labor, and for this reason the "family size" farm is the most desirable; that is, one which provides just a fair amount of work for the farmer and his sons and permits the best use of men, horses and machinery.

Of the "crop farm" where 50 per cent. or over of the total farm receipts are derived from the sale of grain, and the live stock farm where the farmer feeds most of his crops, the latter proved a much better investment, though the fact that they were usually larger than the "crop farm" contributed something to this result. But the average labor income of the crop farmer who owned his own farm was but $28 per farm, whereas the average live-stock farmer under similar conditions had a labor income of $750.

SPECIAL PROSECUTOR ROACH TELLS STORY OF HIS LIFE

Prepared Himself for Practice of Law While Serving Sentence in Prison for Murder.

By United Press.
Terre Haute, Ind., Mar. 25.—With the picturesque figure of Special Prosecutor Joseph Roach rivaling that of Mayor Donn Roberts in the trial of the latter here for election frauds, the United Press sought from Roach a personal statement of his life. He described himself frankly as a former "ward-heeler" and convict and spoke in no uncertain terms of the conditions in Terre Haute. He wrote the following for the United Press.

"I was born in Terre Haute, October 16, 1878. I received a common school and high school education. At about the age of eighteen I drifted into petty politics and became at nineteen a full-fledged 'ward heeler.' My political connections brought me into association with the gambling fraternity. Our city at that time was a mecca for gentlemen of that cult. Before I was twenty-one I was well versed in the esoteric practices of the cult.

"At the age of twenty-one I took to the road, travelling the country over, having my headquarters in Chicago. My experience at this time was full of color, life and action. I came in contact with various types of men pursuing various means of obtaining a livelihood.

"In 1905 while on a visit home I took a human life and was sentenced to life imprisonment for the offense. While in prison I, like the prodigal son, came to myself. I resolved to reconstruct my disintegrated character and to equip myself for a useful career in event I should ever be permitted to walk from the gloomy precincts of the prison a free man.

"During the period of nearly five years during which time I was incarcerated at Michigan City I studied law and delved into literature. Upon being paroled by Governor Marshall in 1910, I entered a law office here and endeavored to observe the practices of law from the viewpoint of its practical application. Eighteen months later I secured a full and complete pardon and on that day was admitted to practice at the Vigo bar.

"While in prison, living as I did among the best thought and highest ideals of all the ages—for I lived there with the great masters of thought and language—I formed ideals that I thought I could carry with me into the practice of law. But upon beginning practice I was quickly disillusioned. For the lawyer of high ideals in Terre Haute would starve to death. I saw mere puppets who had been admitted to the bar without any previous study on their part, but whose chief distinction was their ability to cheat at elections, making money while I fared very unsatisfactorily. In order to keep from starving to death I had to repudiate these high ideals. I got down into the dirty bullying myself.

"This was briefly the situation when a couple of months ago I resolved to direct my feeble efforts toward the complete overturning of a system, the development of years, the roots of which run deep into our society, and a system which, for valhalla and scoundrelism is absolutely unsurpassed in the annals of American civilization.

"The results of this effort I cannot forecast, yet I feel it will be productive of infinite good.
